Masses for the Deceased: Patricia Anne McCusker, Laurence Richardson, recently deceased; Wadih Ramia, Theresa Grace Washington, Eileen Harland, John King, Father Ron Harden, Vilma Mabel Burns, Father Jim Fowler, anniversaries.

CHRIST RETURNS HOME: If one wanted a proof that Christ was in no way considered an extraordinary person when he lived at Nazareth, today's Gospel would provide one. He comes back to his hometown and those who had known him from boyhood are astonished at what they consider to be a complete change in him. Their astonishment gives way to anger and a desire even to kill him when he makes extraordinary claims about himself. They ask one another where he has acquired the wisdom with which he speaks and they refuse to accept him, thinking him guilty of either trickery or malevolent power.

Our Lord never wanted to be other than a man of the people. For most of his life he lived as an ordinary craftsman without giving any indication to his fellow townspeople of the power within him. Even during his public life, he acted with great simplicity, only working miracles, and speaking with authority to further the spread of his kingdom on earth. And what better way than this could he have devised?

Perhaps the best help we can derive from Our Lord's example is to bring home to ourselves that, though, like him, we perform the most ordinary tasks, yet there is a very real sense in which, if we have faith in him, we are far from ordinary. After all, if we are good Christians, Christ is working with and in us so that we can say with St. Paul: For it is when I am weak that I am strong. Our Lord was unable to work miracles in his home country because of unbelief. Lack of faith acts as a barrier to the entrance of God's power. What Our Lord wants from us is a living faith. If we have that, through he may not cure our sickness or rid us of suffering, he will certainly work miracles of grace within us.
