CONTRASTING PICTURES: What a splendid picture the author of the book of Genesis painted of the origin of the world. The Spirit of God moves over darkness, chaos and an inanimate world and with his fostering care brings light and harmony and life. What was a waste-land forms itself into a pattern of sea and land as the first dawn broadens across a landscape made fertile by his breath. Voices are heard where before was universal silence, the cries of animals and the singing of birds in a garden of delights. Last of all man emerges, shaped into the image of his maker, male and female, with whom God walks on intimate terms in the cool of the evening air, into this idyllic scene chaos erupts in another form and darkness once again descends as sin in all its horror enters in.

St. Luke gives us a contrasting scene of beauty. He depicts the Spirit of God coming upon a woman to make her fruitful so that her cousin Elizabeth would cry out Blessed is the fruit of your womb. This fruit of her womb is to undo what sin had done. The darkness is now to be dispelled, what was barren is to be made fertile by the coming of the Light of the World. The first picture shows us evil in the form of a serpent tempting a woman and bringing about her downfall and that of the world. The second picture is that of an angel coming to a woman and asking her to be the mother of the one who would come to restore what had been lost. Her consent gave us the Saviour of the world. No wonder the two cousins were filled with joy; nor should we be surprised that Elizabeth's child should leap in her womb. This was a joy that all of us should share, a joy arising from the greatness of God's love for us all, that he should work out our redemption in this amazing way.

THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

The Jewish Festival of Hanukkah was instituted by Judas Maccabeus on the 25th day of the Jewish month of Chislev (i.e. 25th December). The story of the Feast and its institution is told in the Bible.....1 Maccabees 1:54, Daniel 9:27-11:31; 2 Maccabees 10:5.

After the death of Alexander the Great in 323BC, the Seleucid Kings became masters of Asia Minor. One of these kings, Epiphanes the Fourth, began a campaign of persecution against the Jews. He desecrated the Temple in Jerusalem and erected over the altar of Holocausts an altar where pagan sacrifices were offered. This act, referred to in the Bible as "The Abomination of Desolation" is mentioned both in the First Book of Maccabees and in the Book of Daniel. It took the form of a sacrifice in honour of the pagan god, Zeus Olympios, and was carried out on the 25th December, 168BC. Three years later, Judas Maccabeus, after his first victories, purified the sanctuary, built a new altar and restored the Jewish sacrifices on the same day, 25th December, 165BC, exactly three years after the profanation of the Temple by Antiochus Epiphanes. It was then decided that the Feast of the rededication of the Temple should be observed on the 25th December each year. The feast is mentioned only once in the New Testament. In St. John's Gospel we are told, "It was the time when the feast of the Dedication was being celebrated in Jerusalem. It was winter and Jesus was in the Temple walking up and down in the Portico of Solomon" (John 19:22-23).

The celebration of Hanukkah lasted for eight days and was a most joyful feast. Apart from the ceremonies in the Temple, green branches of trees and palms were carried around as a sign of joy and joyful hymns were sung. The feast was also characterized by the use of lamps. Lamps were lit on the last day of the feast. On this account, the Jewish historian, Josephus, also calls Hanukkah the “Feast of Lights”.

The 25th December is now our Christmas Day. We too celebrate with great joy. The Christmas Tree with its lights and decorations remind us of the procession of branches and palms and the lighting of the lamps on the eight days of the feast. St. John, in the Prologue to his Gospel, gives prominence to the birth of Our Lord as “That life was the light of all people, a light that shines in the dark, a light that darkness could not overpower. The true light that enlightens all people; and He was coming into the world”.

Jesus, the Messiah, is the true Temple and His sacrifice on the Cross replaces all others.

THE CHRISTMAS CRIB

During the last week of Advent and during the Christmas Season, a feature of our churches is the Christmas Crib. This custom reputedly goes back to St. Francis of Assisi, who is thought of have made the first model of the Crib at Greccio in 1223. The figure of the Child Jesus is placed in the manger during the first Mass of Christmas on Christmas Eve, and the figures of the Magi are added on the Feast of The Epiphany (6th January).
