BREAKFAST BY THE LAKE: The appearance of Christ to his apostles by the lakeside after his resurrection had a special beauty and sublimity. It was a scene of mystery and of wonderful intimacy. It had a magic all its own. The early morning light, the huge mass of wriggling silvery fish, the quiet sea-shore, the burning coals and the Master standing by so captivated them that they sat like men in a trance. The miracle, of course, brought back memories of the past but this occasion seemed so different. Here now was a Christ who had died and had come back from death to them, and the mystery of it held them silent. With what wonder then must they have looked at his wounded hands as he served them.

Why did Christ act like this, what sign must we look for in this miracle? No doubt there is a great deal to be read into it but there are two factors which stand out. First he wanted to show that, although he had risen to a new existence, he still retained his humanity – he was the same Christ who loved to mix with ordinary people and share the common details of their lives. He who was divine was also a man who liked to cook fish and supply food for his friends. And secondly it had a messianic significance. He would share a meal with them now as he would one day share a heavenly banquet. After their long toil in the darkness of the world there would come a morning of light and resurrection when he would be waiting for them as he had promised “I will come again and take you to myself so that where I am you also may be”. Of course there was a further reason for the miracle. It was to be a reinforcement of the lesson he had given them before, that without him all their apostolic labours would be in vain. This was directed very much towards Peter who had thought at one time that he could stand on his own feet. Now Christ was to draw from his act of sorrow and reward him by making him shepherd over his flock.
